THIS MONTH IN ...

A quick snapshot of the various programs, services, support and events NASB has planned for its members in the coming month!

Leadership Innovation Vision Engagement

ADVOCACY & GOVERNMENT RELATIONS ... The November election is almost here! Get to know who you're voting for on our Candidates page within the NASB GR section of our website (see page 7). Keep tabs with our GR page as interim hearings are being scheduled as well. January will be here before we know it ... Stay engaged. Share your stories. Call Colby & Matt any time!

ALICAP ... ALICAP invites all member school superintendents, ESU administrators and their board members to the upcoming Annual Membership Meeting, which is scheduled for Wednesday November 18th from 4:00 to 5:00 PM CT in Omaha. The meeting will gather in rooms 210-212 at the CHI Health Center at 455 N. 10th Street, Omaha. There will be prizes, as well as drinks and appetizers provided.

BOARD LEADERSHIP ... Check out "At the Board Table" on page 4 to learn about all things Board Leadership!

EDUCATION LEADERSHIP SEARCH SERVICE ... NASB has a search process to help school districts and ESU's find their next Superintendent or ESU Administrator. We can prepare a proposal to outline the steps of a search process or answer questions. If you are an applicant considering applying for a position, give Shari a call for details or check out of our openings online at https://members.nasbonline.org/elss

GALLUP STRENGTHS ... Everyone does not have the same approach in achieving effective leadership. The demands may be the same, but how each leader meets them can be different. Ask yourself: How do you make things happen? How do you influence others? How do you build and nurture strong relationships? How do you absorb and analyze information? Focus on how you can lead effectively using the talents that come most naturally to you. Be intentional.

MEMBER ENGAGEMENT ... Less than 25 days until we get to see you at the State Education Conference! Our team has been working to hard on the new format for this year. See page 8 for more information. Recent engagement visits have been to ESU 2, Logan View, Seward, Shelton, Pleasanton, Elba, Conestoga, Freeman, Fairbury, and Southern. With this being an election year, we have 10 New Board Member Workshops scheduled for December & January. Be sure to invite your newly elected board member(s), and plan to attend with them!

POLICY SERVICES ... Policy serves as the foundation for effective governance, but strong systems require more than adoption alone. To learn more about what the NASB Policy Support Service offers the board and superintendent contact Lindsey at lheadrick@NASBonline.org or Marcia at mherring@NASBonline.org or Josh at jwall@NASBonline.org. The updated service offers a manual authored by Perry Law Firm, integration into SPARQ Online Publishing, and so much more.

QUORUMS ... Periodically, questions arise when a quorum of a school board attends an NASB workshop, convention, or other educational event. Is that allowed under the Nebraska Open Meetings Act? Yes. Nebraska Statute § 84-1410 specifically exempts travel to and attendance at workshops, conferences, and similar events from the definition of a meeting, even when a quorum of the board is present. The important limitation is that board members should not use the occasion to discuss or take action on business that is specifically related to their own school district. Attend, learn, network, and enjoy the opportunity - but save your district's business for a properly noticed board meeting!

TECHNOLOGY ... EHA Rates Coming Soon! New EHA rates will be released soon! Once updated in Sparq Negotiations, districts can generate projections using the latest benefits data. Watch for an email with more details! Welcome to Our New Sparq Negotiations Users! A warm welcome to Brady Public Schools, Emerson-Hubbard Public Schools, Niobrara Public Schools, Pawnee City Public Schools, Winside Public Schools, and Verdigre Public School! Join Us at the State Education Conference! Don't miss our breakout session, "Board Governance, Policy Visibility, and Staff Negotiations: How Technological Can Your Board Be?" presented by Darion Miller and Nicole Kobus on Thursday at 10 AM.

BELIEVE, BUILD, BELONG: A BLUEPRINT FOR GROWTH

Leadership Innovation Vision Engagement #liveNASB

https://businessviewmagazine.com/schuyler-community-schools/

(Published in Business View Magazine at the link above.) Three years ago, Schuyler Community Schools held about $330,000 in reserve against a $29 million budget, a cushion thin enough to unnerve anyone running a district. Today that reserve is on track to close the year near $4.8 million. In the same stretch, the number of students passing Nebraska's English proficiency exam climbed from roughly 27 to 130, in a district where about 800 of some 2,000 students are learning English. None of it happened by accident. It is the product of a deliberate plan, and a three-word theme the district now repeats like a compass: Believe, Build, Belong.

Best for Kids, Best for the District ... Ask Schuyler's leaders how they decide anything, and the answer narrows to two questions. "Whenever we're looking at making a change, the question is, is this what's best for kids, and is it what's best for the district?" says Dr. Bret Schroder, Superintendent. "If the answer is yes to both, then we make it our focus to make that happen."

Everything stems from there. Schroder frames the work around consistency, intentional use of data, and including everyone in decisions, principles that now link classrooms, budgets, and community partnerships across a rural district that has changed a great deal in a short time.

Technology with a Purpose... In Schuyler, technology is judged by what it does for learning, not by how many devices it puts in hands. The first test, Schroder explains, is whether technology shapes instruction and lifts student achievement and engagement, rather than simply putting "a computer in everybody's hands." The second is whether it opens doors to career pathways.

At the middle school, that ambition shows up on the floor of the STEM room. "Our kids are loving it. We have a very strong STEM teacher," says Teri Ruybalid, middle school Principal. Students build robots, wire electrical connections, and work on remote controls, then troubleshoot when something fails, and Ruybalid adds that the problem-solving has become a big draw in her building. The program is expanding to a second course and a section for high-ability learners, laying a foundation students carry into high school.

Artificial intelligence is newer ground, and Schuyler is approaching it carefully. The administration and board have begun weighing how to set classroom guardrails. "How do we make sure our students aren't misusing it to avoid learning?" Schroder says. His touchstone is the calculator: a tool that helps with the math while the student still learns the math. Ruybalid says the middle school is in the early stages of teaching students to use AI as a tool and to use it safely.

Rebuilding the Foundation of Reading

Two and a half years ago, a hard look at the data set Schuyler's priorities. Reading achievement and English language learning rose to the top. In a district where roughly 800 students are learning English, language progress shapes progress in every subject. "If those students aren't progressing, that's going to hinder them in all their classes," Schroder notes. The district responded on several fronts. It adopted a new K-5 reading curriculum, realigned reading instruction across every building, and invested heavily in its English learner program. The results have been striking. Since 2023, the number of students passing the state's ELPA21 proficiency exam has jumped from about 27 to 129 in a single year.

Staffing changed just as fast. "We had two EL teachers up until about two years ago, and now we currently have six," says Bill Comley, elementary Principal. The district also brought on a new curriculum director, Samantha Ladwig, and moved to a new reading series after the old one stopped delivering. "We were not seeing the results we needed," Comley says. With the new teachers and materials, he expects strong gains as this year's students move up through the grades.

One District, One Direction ... Consistency is a theme in Schuyler, not just a slogan. Under Schroder and Ladwig, the district has leaned into districtwide professional development, weaving English learner strategies into every core subject. The goal is shared expectations without stripping teachers of creativity. "We still have those set guidelines," Comley says, describing the trainings that give staff a common approach.

That cohesion appears to be paying off where it matters most: keeping teachers. After a rough patch, Schuyler has seen a sharp turnaround in retention. "This last year we had the lowest amount of teacher turnover that we've seen in the last 10 or 11 years,"

Schroder says. Of roughly 160 certified staff, only one position remains open. He credits board support for pay and for new recognition of long-term employees at five, ten, and fifteen years, a way of telling staff they are valued.

Real Pathways into the Workforce ... Schuyler's leaders talk constantly about a changing workforce, and they have built real routes into it. It starts with a work-based learning program that sends students into local businesses to learn from the people who run them. "They get out in the community and learn from the local people who have businesses and are willing to work with our students," says Dr. Dave Cunningham, high school Principal.

From there, the pathways get specific. Students can leave campus for a paid welding apprenticeship at Behlen Manufacturing in nearby Columbus while still in high school. A certified nursing assistant program, run with the local hospital, lets juniors and seniors earn full CNA certification before they graduate. A dual-credit mechatronics course, tied to the work at Cargill, teaches the electronics behind modern machines, and a partnership with Central Community College keeps the transition to further training seamless.

The district makes sure students see the whole map. Last year it launched a career and college fair, bringing eighth graders up to talk with community colleges, four-year universities, and employers hiring straight out of high school. Agriculture remains central, too, though it looks nothing like it once did. "Agriculture has gone so far beyond having to drive a tractor," Schroder points out, describing drones spraying fields, GPS tracking, and electric farm equipment that make FFA and ag education some of the most sophisticated programs in the building.

Bringing Graduates Home ... Schuyler's leaders believe a district and its community rise or fall together, and they have built partnerships to prove it. The strongest runs through the chamber. "A strong school system attracts good families," says Audra Jedlicka, Executive Director of the Schuyler Area Chamber of Commerce. Quality schools, she notes, are what families look for when a town wants to draw newcomers.

For Jedlicka, the logic loops back to the local economy. Today's students are tomorrow's employees, and a young community needs to draw its graduates home. "Let's get them educated, and let's get them back in as our future leaders," she says. She and the district are working toward student internships that connect kids to the good jobs already in town.

Those partnerships extend beyond business. The district launched a school resource officer program shared with the local police force, part of a broader push Schroder prioritized from day one. "The health of the school district is directly related to the health of the community, and vice versa," he reflects. Without partnership, shared resources, and communication, he adds, "we're missing the boat."

Money with a Mission ... The financial turnaround underpins everything else. When Schroder arrived, the district's roughly $330,000 reserve left little margin on a $29 million budget where staffing accounts for about 80% of spending. He and the board set a plan, scrutinized spending, and rebuilt. The district expects to close in August with about $4.8 million in reserves.

Stability did not mean standing still. Schuyler spent about a half million dollars on the new elementary reading curriculum and is on track to invest roughly $300,000 more in materials for its English learners. It also equipped its career programs, adding a CNC plasma cutter and new welding gear at the high school and fresh STEM equipment at the middle and elementary schools.

For Board President Rich Brabec, who has served the district for four decades, discipline is the point. "It goes back to what we can do to help our kids achieve the highest level that they can," Brabec says. He describes a systematic approach that ranks priorities and holds the budget line. "Money is not limitless. We have to stay appropriately in budget, and provide the best possible outcome for our kids."

From Foundations to Future ... Looking ahead, the district's priorities circle back to the foundation. Reading and English language development stay at the top. "Those will remain our two priorities until we feel we've reached the point where that's no longer an issue," Schroder says.

Guiding it all is the theme the district adopted this year: Believe, Build, Belong. Schroder describes it as a mantra meant to outlast any single initiative. It asks the district to believe in its students, build the consistent systems that let them succeed, and make sure every student, family, and staff member feels they belong.

For a district that has quietly rebuilt its finances, its reading program, and its ties to the town, success is simple. Three years of steady building have produced a reserve, a plan, and rising scores. The task now is making sure everyone who walks through its doors knows they belong.

CHOOSING YOUR BOARD DELEGATE

Leadership Innovation Vision Engagement #liveNASB

https://members.nasbonline.org/government-relations

This year's Delegate Assembly will take place Friday, November 20, at 8:00 AM, in conjunction with the State Education Conference, at the CHI Health Center - downtown Omaha.

Per the NASB Bylaws, each member district and ESU board of education is allowed and encouraged to have one board member as their voting delegate. As a reminder, having a representative of your board attend Delegate Assembly is a requirement for all boards working toward either the Board of Excellence Award or the President's Board Award.

All items within the NASB Delegate Handout will be considered by this Assembly. This Handout of proposed changes to the bylaws and standing positions for your review prior to the 2026 Delegate Assembly is now posted on the NASB website. To better prepare you and your board's voting representative for the Delegate Assembly, please download, review, and bring this Handout with you to Omaha.

https://members.nasbonline.org/government-relations/nasb-advocacy-handbook

If you haven't already, each board should select one board member to represent the district or ESU as the voting delegate, although multiple members from each board may attend. As a school board member, this is YOUR chance to be heard and help craft the 2027 legislative and leadership initiatives for NASB.

2026 NASB MEMBER DELEGATE ASSEMBLY

WHY IS IT IMPORTANT FOR YOUR DISTRICT TO BE REPRESENTED AT THE DELEGATE ASSEMBLY?

The Delegate Assembly determines NASB's annual legislative and leadership agenda.
The Delegate Assembly is a key cog in securing laws, regulations, and a vision in Nebraska to benefit public education.
The Delegate Assembly is where your voice can be heard.
